ABOUT OUR RADIO PROGRAM: “Indigenous in Music with Larry K” has been broadcasting to the general public since 2010. Our listeners rely on our show to deliver their weekly dose of Indigenous music and interviews. As host, producer and creator Larry values the diversity of cultural expression and traditions which foster the preservation and advancement of diverse musical and artistic entertainment creating a sense of welcoming and belonging, while also enhancing the life and contributions of indigenous people around the world.

Every week host Larry. K brings you two (2) hours of Indigenous sounds, interviews and a mix of new music from our Indigenous musicians from around the Western Hemisphere, a variety of rock, pop, country rock, flute, house and electronica. Our show is recorded at the Say Magazine Studios in Bradenton, FL and is heard around the USA and Canada. The “Indigenous in Music with Larry K” radio show was developed by Larry Knudsen to support indigenous musicians. After we did our research, we discovered that our indigenous musicians and artists were not getting the exposure needed to get into mainstream music and entertainment.
